

Living in the Country Has its' Benefits

By: Ron Henely

We were doing yard work and I heard this tom gobbling. When we finished I told Adam to grab the shotgun and I grabbed my calls and vest.

No camo clothing for me. We were hid in a cedar tree. The turkeys were across the road in a field about 1/2 mile away.

While they were coming in a car had to stop for them. They went back into the field across the road. After the car went by I called to them again.

The tom was with about 10-12 hens. He was gobbling at every call but was trailing the hens. They led him right to the cedar tree.

He was about 10 yards out when Adam shot him with the 20ga.

It is good to live in the country.

Me and Adam with his first turkey.